OSHA Signs Local Partnership Agreement With Bob Moore Construction

ARLINGTON, TEXAS - Bob Moore Construction and OSHA have signed a formal agreement to make the company a member of the OSHA Local Partnership program, making the Arlington general contractor one of only five construction companies in north Texas to earn this prestigious recognition.

The formal signing took place February 7 at the Park City Club in Dallas. In attendance were Bob Moore Construction's Mike Moore, Chief Executive Officer and Dino Sideris, Safety Director; QUOIN president Raleigh Roussell and members of regional OSHA management.

Local OSHA Partnership Program

The OSHA Partnership grants authority for more self-governance to contractors that have demonstrated their commitment to safety and OSHA requirements. The approval process takes several months and includes a review of the contractor's written safety program and records, input from the contractor's insurance company and a jobsite inspection by local OSHA leadership.

Prior to 2003, OSHA provided a state-level partnership program for general contractors based on their safety program and workers compensation claims. In 2003, OSHA worked with QUOIN, the local chapter of The Associated General Contractors of America, to implement a new, more stringent local partnership program. For local partnerships, contractors must achieve all state program requirements, but must also implement standards that exceed OSHA requirements and demonstrate superior safety leadership on their jobsites.

Bob Moore Construction and Jobsite Safety

"As a Partner we essentially become empowered by OSHA," said Dino Sideris. "This is a tremendous partnership of trust based on our track record of excellence. We are now able to respond to safety matters more efficiently and aggressively than before because we have earned the trust of OSHA that allows us to take on more ownership of our program."

"We are extremely pleased to have been accepted in this partnership," said Ed McGuire, Vice President of Construction for Bob Moore Construction. "We expect safety to be a core value for anyone who works on our jobsites. That is what drives our safety program. Now as a member of the local OSHA Partnership we can take even greater ownership of jobsite safety. Thanks to the efforts of Dino Sideris and our superintendents, Bob Moore Construction continues to be a recognized leader in construction safety in north Texas."
